► Cops blocked off Essex Street buildings yesterday where an officer was shot.

Police were searching Thursday for a man who shot a police officer on the Lower East Side. The officer, shot in the chest, was saved by his bulletproof vest.

Officer Brian Groves, 30, was chasing a man with a gun down the stairs in the Seward Park Housing complex when the man shot the seven-year veteran in the chest from less than eight feet away.

Police blocked off several surrounding streets Thursday while they searched all day for Groves' shooter.

Fliers handed out at the crime scene described him as a black male in his 20s, about 5-foot-9, last seen wearing a black shirt with red basketball shorts.

Groves is now in stable condition at Bellevue Hospital, where doctors checked his Kelly said Groves is the ninth NYPD officer to be shot since January. Other officers who have been attacked this year:

► MTA police officer John Barnett had to undergo four

"It's really miraculous that he's going to survive," Dr. Eli Kleinman said at a news conference. "He was shot right over the heart."

Officials attributed Groves' survival to his Kevlar bulletproof vest.

"[The vest] kept him alive and will allow him to see his little girls again," Mayor Michael Bloomberg said.

Checking the stairwells shortly before 4 a.m., Groves opened a door to find a man holding a silver revolver. After yelling 'gun' to his partner, Groves pursued the gunman down the stairs.

Between the 18th and 19th floors, the gunman turned and shot Groves in the sternum, according to police. Without realizing he had been shot, Groves returned fire and chased the man down more

Three children dead after yacht capsizes

► Police investigate why yacht sank off Oyster Bay
 ► Boat was ferrying people after Fourth of July fireworks
 ► Officials trying to find out what happened

A private yacht ferrying 27 friends and family to watch Fourth of July fireworks capsized off New York's Long Island and three children drowned, Nassau County Police said Thursday.

The children's bodies were found in the cabin of the submerged boat in the waters off the town of Oyster Bay after a 911 call was placed at about 10:10 p.m. on Wednesday, police said.

"These individuals were out observing a fireworks show. They were returning from this fireworks display," Detective Lieutenant John Azzata of Nassau County Police said at a news conference on Thursday.

Investigators were trying to determine what caused the 34-foot boat to sink, including overcrowding, a strong thunderstorm in the area at about the same time, a mechanical problem and wakes from other boats.

Also under investigation is whether the 1984 Silverton cabin cruiser was equipped with 27 life preservers for all on board, as required by law. Children under age 12 are required to wear a life jacket while on board, except while in the cabin, Azzata said.

Police scuba divers and other authorities found the bodies of a 12-year-old boy, an 11-year-old girl and an 8-year-old girl in the cabin of the sunken boat. None of the children has the same last name, but it was unclear whether they were related, Azzata said.

He declined to describe their relationship to the owner, whose boat was a "very recent purchase."

Neither the boat owner nor a second operator was suspected of driving while intoxicated, Azzata said.

The district attorney's office was contacted, although it is unknown whether criminal charges will be filed. The boat started sinking in 21 feet of water inside Cold Spring Harbor off the shore of Oyster Bay, Azzata said.

It quickly began drifting and soon was in 60 to 70 feet of water, where it remained on Thursday amid efforts to recover the vessel. REUTERS

Obama to hammer Romney's Bain record on campaign bus trip

CHIP SOMODEVILLA/GETTY IMAGES

► President Barack Obama delivers remarks during a campaign event at the Wolcott House Museum Complex in Maumee, Ohio.

President Barack Obama told voters in the battleground state of Ohio Thursday that his administration filed a claim with the World Trade Organization against China, charging it with unfair tariffs on U.S. autos, a welcome message in the U.S. rust belt.

"Americans aren't afraid to compete. We believe in competition," Obama said while campaigning in Maumee, Ohio. "But we're going to make sure competition is fair."

The WTO complaint came as Obama began a two-day bus trip in Ohio and Pennsylvania. The "Betting on America" tour, as his campaign has dubbed it, runs through areas reliant on the auto industry.

The label is designed to draw a contrast with presumed Republican presidential nominee Mitt Romney, a former private — equity executive whose business made investments overseas.

Romney's experience "has been in owning companies that were called 'pioneers of outsourcing,'" Obama said. "My experience has been in saving the American auto industry — and as long as I'm president, that's what I'm gonna be doing."

Obama also spoke about the health care law. The affirmation means it's time to put acrimony about the measure behind and focus on its protections, he said.

TOM FOREMAN

POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT
FOR CNNIS IT HOT ENOUGH?

In the spirit of leaping into a cool pool, I'm beginning to think the only way out of election hell is for us to hold the vote next Tuesday and be done with it. Seriously, can you endure the thought of a sweltering summer being pelted with attack ads, inane accusations and mindless media chatter about who the next president should be? Because we are facing just that, my friend.

For many voters, the presidential election process has turned into a forced march through a blazing desert of shallow ideas, cheap propaganda and specious claims.

Real-life concerns are baked down to sound bites. Honest struggles for truth and freedom are broiled into tidy campaign slogans. And while we stagger around, blinded by the white-hot rhetoric, the multimillionaire candidates tool alongside in air-conditioned superbuses professing to feel our pain.

No wonder a new poll by the Pew Research Center finds that we are already tired of this election. Sure, voters told Pew that all the debate over issues and coverage of the candidates is informative, but 67 percent of the respondents summed up the election season in a word: exhausting.

Part of the problem is, of course, the length of the contest. Back in the 1700s, when we celebrated our first Fourth of July, running for the presidency was a much shorter affair.

"Who wants the job?"

"Well, there's Jefferson ... Adams ... a couple more."

"OK. Shall we vote?"

As time marched on, our elections became more complicated, but still typically involved months of campaigning, not years. Voters could still count on periodic relief: oases of cooling tempers amid the white-hot rhetoric of the trail.

Not anymore. As soon as one election ends, the next begins. Even as the winner drops the balloons and celebrates, the re-election furnace is being fired up. The losers do the same, barely taking a breath before roaring on in search of new donors, news strategies and new ways to scorch the earth beneath their foes.

Problem is that this summer, as Pew found, a lot of voters are feeling burned.

'Katy Perry: Part of Me'

Grade: ①②③④⑤

This new documentary shows Katy Perry's genuine affection for her followers — she does daily meet-and-greets — so it is no surprise that "Part of Me" is geared toward pleasing her Katycats. (Note: Though Metro gives "Part of Me" three stars, dedicated fans would be more likely to give it four and a half.) Intercut with lively performances from the wildly successful "Teenage Dream" tour — six costumes changes in one song! — are musical numbers galore, visits with her slightly grumpy grandmother and interviews with her staff and friends who generally say the kind of things you expect them to. It's only when the tour nears its end and Perry's marriage is in tatters that the movie reveals something other than a carefully manicured picture of the star.

If you're not a Katy-cat, you may end up liking Katy Perry the person more than her movie. ● METRO

Now that "The Amazing Spider-Man" is finally in theaters, it seems as though star Andrew Garfield will at last be able to get a full eight hours of sleep.

"I've been nervous for the last two years, it seems," he explains. "Every day, there's been something that's made me have to suppress shaking."

Clearly the British actor felt some pressure after taking up the mantle of Spidey that recently was worn by Tobey Maguire in the three installments that ran from 2002-2007. But it was Garfield's personal connection to Marvel's signature comic book character that got him all tied up in knots, so to speak, for the reboot.

"We all have that one fictional character, at least, that we all care about so much," he says. "If ever that opportunity came for any of us to play it, to serve it, do it justice, when that moment comes, you're like, 'I'm not allowed to sleep. I'm not allowed to think about anything else! I need to dedicate everything to this person that's given me so much in my life that I want to give all of myself to it.'"

Garfield's not the kind of actor who comes off as disingenuous — unless of course, it's in the script. But his naturally quiet, smart, somewhat befuddled nature comes across in his version of Spider-Man, who's more fidgety and anxious than the Spideys before him. That aspect of the masked hero's DNA was what Garfield held on to.

"That was how I always felt growing up — I felt like an underdog. I was a skinny kid. I always thought I should have been bigger for some reason, because society tells you that," he says. "I played rugby, and I was good at it, but I got concussed all the time because I was a weakling. So that was something that I identified with for Peter, because he felt stronger on the inside than he did on the outside. ... And there's nothing better than seeing a skinny guy beat the crap out of big guys."

► Andrew Garfield can identify with underdog Peter Parker.

A weakling, he might have been at one time, but Garfield will be poised for superstardom should this reboot of the Spider-Man franchise take off. The 28-year-old, however, has made a vow to audition for every single role he's interested in — an unconventional practice for well-established actors.

"If you're at a pool hall and you're playing pool and you put in 50 cents every time, you're going to enjoy that game because you paid for it," he explains. "But if you figure out a way to jimmy the thing, and you can get a free game of pool out of it, you're not going to care so much about the game. There's something in that — having to work for something, as opposed to being handed something. I've had to work for everything that I've been a part of — and this is what's satisfying about it, because you know that they really looked at everyone and you are the right person for that particular story and that particular moment. There's something about staying grounded and staying humble and making sure that you appreciate everything that you have."

OWN BORN ON THE FOURTH OF JULY ON BLU-RAY™ FOR THE FIRST TIME EVER

Oliver Stone is no stranger to controversial topics — or controversial films. In his latest, “Savages,” he takes on the ongoing, bloody Mexican drug war. Kidnapping and violence erupt when a cartel attempts a hostile takeover of two state-side growers (Aaron Johnson and Taylor Kitsch) and the girlfriend they share (Blake Lively).

How do you go about approaching such a real topic with a fictional film?

Well, we're based on a book, so this is not a “Traffic”-like approach docudrama about the situation. We took on a hypothetical fiction. This movie was about a situation that could happen, but hasn't, which is that a cartel would move in on some niche, boutique growers — independent growers who grow high-grade product here in the United States.

What are your own feelings about the drug war?

Well, you'd have to go back to 1969. Why do you have to declare a war on drugs? I didn't understand it, and I don't know why America loves the concept of war — war in Vietnam, war in Iraq, war in Afghanistan. It's just endless wars. By fighting a war you put a huge amount of money in, the budgets go up and a lot of corruption ensues. That's the history of war. Not only that but America has screwed itself by creating a prison system that's out of control and a Drug Enforcement Agency that is beyond insane in terms of creating scenarios.

THE WAR FOR DRUGS

- ▶ ‘Why do you have to declare a war on drugs?’ asks Oliver Stone, the controversial filmmaker behind ‘Savages’

What about the prospect of marijuana legalization?

I don't see much progress recently, with the Obama administration going against it. The California state laws are far more liberal and hopefully will prevail in the progressive movement, but with an election? Forget it. Stupidity rules. It's the lowest common denominator. At the very least, decriminalization. How about that? Let's empty the prison population, which is enormous.

Q&A

How much of a political point do you want this movie to make compared to your earlier films?

I don't think like that. I don't have an agenda. The movies should work unto themselves. It becomes controversial sometimes; but frankly, I make stories. I make them exciting. I'm not trying to sell legalization here because the story unfolds as it does.

When depicting this kind of violence, how far do you go?

Well, not too far because you have something called the R rating and you have a lot of Puritanism in this country about sexuality, so you cannot do things that you could do in European film. You also have actors who make personal choices and they don't want to do certain things, but the book was pretty explicit. We couldn't exactly do that book because we wouldn't have gotten a rating. So I'm guided by my own sense of judgment, and hopefully taste, as to what an audience can stand. It's certainly not as realistic as it really is, that's for sure. I mean, you could throw somebody in a barrel of acid, as a cartel has done, and watch them scream and yell as they die.

UNIVERSAL PICTURES

Oliver Stone is in ‘Natural Born Killers’ mode with ‘Savages’

“Savages”

Director: Oliver Stone

Cast: Aaron Johnson, Taylor Kitsch, Blake Lively

Rating: R Grade: 00000

Aaron Johnson and Taylor Kitsch are Ben and Chon, drug dealers and two thirds of a love triangle with California cutie Ophelia (Blake Lively). They sell a potent strain of legal medical marijuana but also siphon off some for illicit profit, which earns the attention of a Mexican Baja drug cartel run by Elena (Salma Hayek). She'll do anything to create a “joint” venture, including kidnapping Ophelia. Revenge turns bloody when Elena's enforcer, Lado (Benicio Del Toro), gets involved and complicated and DEA agent (John Travolta) double-crosses everyone.

Guns, drugs, threesomes; this is Stone's best picture since Reagan was president. He's working viscerally here and you can feel everything: the coastal languors of Laguna Beach, the scuzziness of Mexican border towns, Lively's silken suntan. For a violent popcorn movie, it's pretty sensual. Johnson and Kitsch are good and evil, flip sides of the same coin, while Lively isn't as sprightly as her name suggests — but she does do damaged quite well.

THE WORD

Metro's Monica Weymouth shares her take on the world of gossip @monicaatmetro monica.weymouth@metro.us

Frank Ocean's surprising first love

Hip-hop star Frank Ocean spent July 4 reminiscing about his first summer love, and — unlike Anderson Cooper's announcement earlier this week — the Tumblr post attracted some attention.

"We spent that summer, and the summer after, together. Everyday almost. And on the days we were together, time would glide. Most of the day I'd see him, and his smile," says the singer, songwriter and member of Odd Future. "Sleep I would often share with him. By the time I realized I was in love, it was malignant. It was hopeless. There was no escaping, no negotiating to the women I had been with, the ones I cared for and thought I was in love with."

While Ocean didn't ultimately disclose if he is gay or bisexual, his Odd Future collaborator, Tyler, the Creator, sent out a tweet of support for sharing the personal story: "My Big Brother Finally Did That. Proud Cause I Know That Is Difficult Or Whatever. Anyway, I'm A Toilet."

Hip-hop mogul Russell Simmons also chimed in with some ► Frank Ocean's new album drops July 17.

thoughts about the industry, which has very few openly gay stars. "Today is a big day for hip-hop. It is a day that will define who we really are," he wrote on his blog. "How compassionate will we be? How loving can we be? How inclusive are we?"

Russell, we think you'll be pleasantly surprised, judging from Tyler's tweet — that kid took it in, offered his support during a difficult time and moved on to toilets in the span of 140 characters.

Tom Cruise, we owe you one

When not picking apart his participation in Scientology, the gossip mill tends to focus on how Tom Cruise controlled Katie Holmes' career like a sparkle-toothed puppet master.

The latest evidence is that he talked her out of participating in a "Dawson's Creek" reunion with former co-stars James Van Der Beek and Joshua Jackson.

"[Producers] were begging her to sign on for a reunion movie," a source tells Us Weekly. "Tom said absolutely no way and thought going backwards would be bad. She wanted to do the movie and reconnect with her fans."

Katie, watch yourself. If a couple more stories like this leak, you'll have a hard time convincing the judge that Tom is the crazy one.

We hope it was worth the ride

Jillian Michaels couldn't find her keys Tuesday morning, but it turns out she had bigger problems: The trainer and reality TV star's Bentley was also missing from the driveway.

Cops spotted the stolen car and arrested a suspect after he crashed into a pole.

"Thanks so much for all your concern regarding the burglary," Michaels later tweeted. "We are all fine and that's what counts. Stuff is just stuff after all."

Wise words, but we're not so sure it's over — this is, after all, a woman who gets paid to outrun Bentleys and psychologically terrorize strangers who steal cookies.

Talking points

Another McConaughey on the way

Newlyweds Matthew and Camilia McConaughey are getting ready to add another member to their family. "Happy birthday America, more good news, Camila and I are expecting our 3rd child," the actor tweeted Wednesday. "God bless, just keep livin." The couple have two children, 4-year-old Levi and 2-year-old Vida.

► The McConaugheys are expecting again.

Renner has a back-up gig

Jeremy Renner, star of the new "Bourne Legacy" film, has a side job flipping houses in Los Angeles. He's renovated more than 15 homes since 2002, including a mansion he may be about to list for $25 million, according to an interview in the new Esquire. "I'm very lucky," he tells the magazine. "I could have pretty easily been driving a forklift."

Lindsay Lohan (probably) not dating a porn star

Rumors that Lindsay Lohan was dating porn star James

► Deen

Deen were apparently too good to be true. "I don't know anything about her except for that she's a really nice, down-to-earth, normal girl," Deen tells the website Animal New York. "We went to a business dinner, and she was very professional. She drank coffee and water." Deen, 26, and Lohan are co-starring in Bret Easton Ellis' upcoming film "The Canyons."

Rihanna's dad approves of Brown

We might not be ready for Rihanna and Chris Brown to be together — but Rihanna's father, for one, approves. "Chris has matured a lot. I think everybody has to put the past behind them. And they seem to have done that," Ronald Fenty tells Grazia Magazine. "Being a couple is all up to her. Every decision is her decision. I just wish her the best."

Legends of death panels never die

So lifetime caps on health insurance coverage are gone! What the heck does that mean when some unelected death panel will decide who gets treatment and who won't? If you're old, you are expendable and not worthy of further investment. Hey the sooner a senior dies the less SS payments are paid. Better keep a potential taxpayer or a Democrat voter alive than and old conservative! Right? Did AARP and Congress tell us a big lie? Is this a tax, Sen. Casey?

JOSEPH DUPONT, VIA E-MAIL

America's addiction?

Members of Congress express outrage over the Affordable Care Act, a law to ensure Americans quality health care. Yet they express no outrage over armaments and wars that cost our nation trillions of dollars and the blood of our youth. This sad situation is analogous to an addict who spends lavishly on a destructive habit, but cries poverty when told to seek medical help.

GLENN HAYES, KEW GARDENS, N.Y.

Why are we so surprised?

Why is anyone surprised about massive power outages caused by severe weather? Ice storms and blizzards, severe thunderstorms, hurricanes, tornadoes — it always happens. Considering all the infrastructure improvements we were supposedly getting out of the first phase of the stimulus, why didn't they think to replace overhead power lines with underground power lines?

DANIEL JELKE, VIA E-MAIL

Congrats to Alec Baldwin

It seemed your paper was the one that got the GREAT shot of Mr. Baldwin, the best looking Baldwin brother, entering his nuptials with a beautiful smile to mark the very special occasion. It was the picture I was waiting for, and it was indeed sweet!

ML SCHIERLE, NEW YORK CITY

Cooper's coming out shouldn't be big deal

"I'm gay," revealed news personality Anderson Cooper, exposing a part of his private life that should be of concern to no one. But with marriage equality continuing to gain public and legal support, being gay has become a political issue, and events such as Cooper's announcement transcend the individual and contribute to a cultural shift. However, I am looking forward to the day when such disclosures barely merit a mention in the entertainment news, let alone make national headlines.

DAVID TERHUNE, BROOKLYN

Overbearing diplomacy?

U.S.-Iran diplomacy is like I came to your house and said, "I have a gun to protect my family from people with guns; but you cannot have one. If you think about making a gun, I will put a financial siege on your family and make them suffer and want. All my trusted sources tell me you are not even thinking of making a gun, but I'm going to do this anyway because I basically want to beat you up and take your stuff."

Match GAME

► Houston gives offer sheet to Lin, but will Knicks match? ► Options limited despite major cap damage

If Linsanity returns to the Knicks, it's going to come at a huge markup.

The Houston Chronicle reports that Knicks point guard Jeremy Lin has been given an offer sheet somewhere in the neighborhood of the four-year, $30-million deal the Rockets offered Goran Dragic. Dragic turned the offer down and will reportedly sign with the Suns. No contracts can be signed until July 11.

As a restricted free agent, the Knicks will have an opportunity to match any deal Lin receives. If he agrees to the Rockets' deal, the Knicks will have three days to match it.

The contract offered to Lin would be for approximately $5 million each of first two seasons, with a large increase in the final two seasons, often referred to as a "poison pill."

Howard still an option?

The Nets are still trying to work out a deal for disgruntled Magic center Dwight Howard despite trading for Joe Johnson.

According to CBS Sports, the Nets reworked their signing with Bosnian forward Mirza Teletovic in order to free up cap space for Howard. ● METRO/MO

The new NBA collective bargaining agreement has a stricter luxury tax beginning in 2013-14 and the Knicks would likely be over the cap with just the contracts of Lin, Carmelo Anthony, Amar'e Stoudemire and Tyson Chandler if they matched the Rockets' offer.

The Knicks were offered a surprise respite when Jason Kidd announced he would sign with the team, thereby eliminating the need to scrounge for back-up talent such as former Knick Raymond Felton or Aaron Brooks. But the team will likely still match the Rockets' offer to Lin.

Lin played for the Rockets last preseason before being cut and signing with the Knicks. He averaged 14.6 points and 6.2 assists per game in 35 games (25 starts) last season. He had surgery and missed the remainder of the season after a small tear in the meniscus of his left knee was discovered March 24.

mark.osborne@metro.us

$19M

Joe Johnson makes $19,752,645 in 2012-13 — the fifth-highest in the NBA and $2 million more than LeBron James.

The Knicks' cap

- The team has seven players locked up for the 2012-13 season: Carmelo Anthony, Amar'e Stoudemire, Tyson Chandler, Toney Douglas, Iman Shumpert, Josh Harrellson and Jerome Jordan. They have a team option on Dan Gadzuric and qualifying offers to Lin and Landry Fields.
- Fields received a "poison pill" contract from Toronto for $20 million that the Knicks likely won't match.
- The salary cap issue comes into play if they match the Rockets' offer for Lin, which would be about $10 million per year starting in 2014-15.
- The salary cap will be about $60 million in 2012-13 — it's announced officially later in July — and will only rise slightly over the next two years. However, the Knicks will have $71.4 million tied up in Anthony ($23.5M), Stoudemire ($23.4M), Chandler ($14.5M) and Lin ($10M, should they match Houston) in 2014-15. Teams $10-$15 million over the cap will pay a tax of $3.50 on the dollar.

Mr. October slams A-Rod

Reggie Jackson is still the "straw that stirs the drink" after all these years.

Jackson gave an interview to Sports Illustrated for their next issue where he called out current Yankee Alex Rodriguez on his past steroid use.

"Al's a very good friend," Jackson said. "But I think there are real questions about his numbers. As much as I like him, what he admitted about his usage does cloud some of his records."

Rodriguez admitted to steroid use while on Texas. He is currently fifth all-time in home runs. METRO

New Kidd on the block

► Future Hall of Famer shuns Mavs, signs with Knicks ► Likely to provide veteran leadership for Jeremy Lin ► Sign-and-trade deal still a possibility

GARRETT ELLWOOD/NBA/GETTY IMAGES

► Kidd had hoped to join Deron Williams in Brooklyn or Dallas, but after cap issues made that impossible in Brooklyn, he appeared ready to return to the Mavericks.

One day after the Knicks saw veteran point guard Steve Nash slip through their fingers in a trade to the Lakers, they added a different veteran.

ESPN is reporting that Jason Kidd will sign with the Knicks for their mini mid-level exception of slightly more than $3 million for three years ($9 million total). It was believed as recently as Thursday afternoon that he would re-sign with the Mavericks.

ESPN's Marc Stein said it is still possible a sign-and-trade with Dallas would be worked out instead of a straight deal with the Knicks. It is not known who would be included, but likely not Iman Shumpert, who was discussed in the sign-and-trade for Nash.

Free agents can only make verbal agreements to sign until July 11.

After Nash went by the wayside, the Knicks were backed into the corner of being forced to match Houston's $30-million offer sheet to Jeremy Lin with few other point guards on the market. Now, the Knicks will likely still match Houston, but also have one of the greatest point guards of all-time backing him up. And they no longer have to look for a backup to Lin, such as Raymond Felton.

Kidd, 39, will be entering his 21st season in the NBA next year. The Knicks will be his fourth team, with two separate stays in Dallas.

He is second all-time in total assists, third all-time in 3-point field goals, second all-time in steals and has been a member of 10 All-Star teams. He won his only NBA championship in 2011 with the Mavericks.

MARK OSBORNE
mark.osborne@metro.us

Nothing but Nets

As happy as Knicks fans are, Nets fans are equally sad. Kidd is arguably the greatest player in team history.

- Kidd played six and a half years in New Jersey and took them to their only two NBA Finals appearances.
- In his six full seasons, he averaged 14.2 points, nine assists and 7.1 rebounds per game.
